2022 (令和 4) 年度大学院社会福祉学研究科入試問題 (英語)

2022 年 9 月 4 日実施 A 日程

1. 次の文を読み、その内容を日本語で 160 字以上 200 字以内にまとめなさい。

According to the Japanese government's preliminary figures, 20,919 people in Japan took their own lives in 2020, the first annual increase in 11 years.

A startling increase was seen among women and school children. These tragic figures suggest that those groups have been hit particularly hard by the economic and social malaise inflicted by the coronavirus pandemic.

There were around 7,000 suicides among women in 2020. That is about half the number of men who killed themselves, but still represents a 15% increase from 2019. It's also in stark contrast to the 11 years of consecutive decline in men's suicide numbers. Many women are non-regular workers, a part of the labor force more likely to be hit hard by an economic slump. An increase in domestic violence cases, seen as people stayed at home because of the pandemic, is also likely to have contributed to the rise in women's suicides.

Within child suicides, there was an especially large surge among high school students. The Ministry of Health, Labor and Welfare pointed to worries regarding post-graduation career or academic choices and poor academic performance as likely causes, but increased stress at home during nationwide school closures last spring has been named as one possible cause.

No. 2

But the rising suicide figure is not due solely to the coronavirus's impact. According to a survey by one nonprofit organization, most of those who killed themselves faced diverse problems, and about 70% of them had been using some kind of consultation service. Local governments ought to be playing a major role in suicide prevention

In Tokyo's Adachi Ward, administrative service desks listen to people's problems and then involve the relevant municipal government department to help, creating a thoroughgoing response system. Staff have also been given training on spotting signs of suicide risk. There are also places where, if a young person searches the phrase "I want to die" online, contact information for counseling services is automatically brought up.

If the coronavirus economic slump continues for long, we may see yet higher suicide numbers. We need countermeasures interweaving social welfare, education, employment and other areas. The central and local governments must overcome the limitations imposed by the pandemic, and make sure help gets to people who need it.

Temporary Rest: Professional and Volunteer Support

Family members who are caregivers can take a temporary break from caring for their loved ones to rest and refresh themselves. This support is called "respite care" (respite means rest or pause), and in the case of elderly care, day services and short stays are applicable. Respite care is an important way to prevent caregivers from suffering from physical and mental fatigue due to daily care at home.

At Momijinoie (House of Momiji), nurses, caregivers, nursery school teachers, and other professional staff with their own qualifications provide care from both medical and welfare perspectives. As a medical-type short-term facility that takes care of children who need medical care, such as ventilator management and suctioning, we provide 24-hour medical care, as well as daily living assistance such as meals, elimination, and bathing, and play and learning to promote children's development. Seeing the children relaxing and enjoying themselves, mothers and other family members are relieved from the pressure of care and can take a moment to rest.

It is the volunteers who make such care possible. At Momijinoie, there are about 100 registered volunteers. We ask them to read stories to the children, help at the reception, and organize the rooms and toys. The past year and a half has been difficult due to the prevention of the new coronavirus infection, but not only full-time staff like us, but also volunteers in various forms are indispensable.

Parents who use Momijinoie come with a lot of baggage. This is because they need to bring all their medical equipment such as ventilators. Volunteers at the reception carry that luggage and disinfect the wheels of the children's wheelchairs. Some are good at cleaning. The contractors do the whole cleaning, but they also make sure that the areas that are out of contract and cannot be touched are completely clean and spick and span.

Of course, professional work is important, but especially in the world around children, it is not just about family and professionals. If they can go out normally, they can meet people in the community, but there are many children with medical care who do not have the opportunity to go out. Momijinoie is also a place where they can meet various people, uncles and aunts.
